War Brings Autos to Crow Indians.
The British are anxious to secure good horses for use in the present war, and they are buying large numbers from the Crow Indians.

The Crows are the wealthiest of the northern Indian tribes and their horses are the best.

The British are paying good prices to the tribe, each horse fetching $150.
It has become quite a craze to spend the money thus obtained in buying motor cars. Even the poorest Crow possesses from ten to twelve horses.
At the first opportunity he sells these and buys a car.

During the Boer war the British army purchased thousands of the Indian ponies. The animals were light, but strong, and capable of great endurance. With the money from their ponies, the Crows invested in thoroughbred stallions and mares, finally possessing a remarkably fine strain.

The Society Islands, far away in the South seas, now have a wireless communication with the outer world, a radio station having been opened by the French government on the island of Tahiti last winter.

Communication with the United States will be by way of Samoa and New Zealand, and thence by cable to San Francisco. It is expected that the cost of messages to the United States will exceed $1 a word. Later on it is hoped to reduce this more than half by sending the messages over an all-wireless route.
